

Dear Scalio recruitment team,

Within my activity on the job market my attention was drawn to open Product Manager position in your company. This opportunity looks very interesting for me since I am open for new challenges in the field of product management.

I am a highly skilled Product manager with 5+ experience launching and growing different products (ecommerce, classifieds, marketplace). I worked both without a dedicated team and in charge of product domains with several feature teams. With Leroy Merlin and TSUM I initiated new product management systems (LESS, Kanban and OKR).

On the other hand, technical background (I am able to read, understand and even create code) along with high level proficiency in data analysis allow me not only find, validate and describe product requirements within user researches, but also dive deep into system analysis and participate in product delivery along with software developers.

I also have a passion for coding in python (Flask) and reactJS and have several pet projects. Once I was even close to selling one of created products as a FoodTech solution to a well-known corporation.

I am currently searching for a remote job outside Russia (I relocated to Georgia about a year ago) to start my international career, and if it is not an issue for Scalio, I have a good feeling about my profile fitting your requirements.

Assuming the above I am sure that my qualifications make me a suitable candidate for the job. You can find my latest CV attached to the online application form. I would love to further explain my motivation and tell you details of my experience in phone or video call. You can reach me either by phone via +995 591 030758 or by email via akhmed.kadymov@gmail.com

Sincerely,

Akhmed Kadymov
